

Eurest responded appropriately. Thus far all their handling of the incident and customer has been appropriate. ORS's Food Team will await further disposition (if any) of the investigation. Tameika Kastner, DOHS Sanitarian responded by email on Monday, December 23, 2019, the following:

"Since last week, no other customers reported illness from eating the same salad. The salad was also served for a few days to hundreds of customers.

This is most likely an incident that does not involve the salad. There is also no indication that it is a foodborne outbreak and no additional actions to take. I will keep the customer's food history and personal information on file. "
